(PDF) A review of intelligent tutoring systems in e-learning

The most well-understood personalized learning environments are intelligent tutoring systems —these systems compare student input or responses to an expert model, selecting problems and feedback according to (continuously updated) models of the learner's likely knowledge and the instructional path most likely to move the learner toward expert understanding (e.g., Anderson, Corbett, Koedinger, & Pelletier, 1995; Corbett, Koedinger, & Anderson, 1997; Graesser et al., 2004; VanLehn, 2006).

Intelligent Tutoring Systems designs differ significantly from their historical computer-driven predecessors. Rather than the one-size-fits-all strategy of delivering content to a passive learner in those designs, ITS designs are able to customize the learning experience the student receives based on factors such as pre-existing knowledge, learning style, and the student's progress through the content material.
