In Living Without Free Will, Derk Pereboom contends that given our best scientific theories, factors beyond our control ultimately produce all of our actions, and that we are therefore not morally responsible for them. His stance is similar to traditional hard determinism, although he maintains that if our actions exhibit the sort of indeterminacy attributed to quantum mechanical events, they would still be produced by factors beyond our control, and we would not be responsible for them.

This is a strange rejoinder, analogous to what many religious people allege against atheism: Without a belief in God, human beings will cease to be good to one another. Both responses abandon any ...
