Particle Deposition and Aggregation: Measurement, Modelling and Simulation (Colloid and Surface Engineering)

Particle Deposition and Aggregation: Measurement ...

Particle deposition is the spontaneous attachment of particles to surfaces. The particles in question are normally colloidal particles, while the surfaces involved may be planar, curved, or may represent particles much larger in size than the depositing ones.

Deposition processes may be triggered by appropriate hydrodynamic flow conditions and favorable particle-surface interactions. Depositing particles may just form a monolayer which further inhibits additional particle deposition, and thereby
