But the lights of Broadway haven't been entirely dimmed by the pandemic. The seats may be empty, and the actors and crew nowhere to be seen, but every stage on Broadway has a lamp like the one...

Keeping Broadway's lights on - CBS News

A ghost light is a small, single bulbed light, usually a floor lamp of some sort, that shines on the dark stage throughout the night when the theater is closed and unoccupied. The more logical reason as to why we light this at night is because it's there in case someone is in the theater working late. It allows them to see where they're going.

A ghost light is an electric light that is left energized on the stage of a theater when the theater is unoccupied and would otherwise be completely dark. It typically consists of an exposed incandescent bulb, CFL lamp, or LED lamp mounted in a wire cage on a portable light stand. It is usually placed near center stage. Ghost lights are also sometimes known as equity lights or equity lamps, possibly indicating their use was originally mandated by the Actors' Equity Association.
