In some ways, the title 'Documents of Ancient Greek Music' (DAGM) is slightly misleading, since some two-thirds of these documents are 'Roman'. Pedantry aside, while many of these 61 documents are by date Roman, they are all composed in Greek, both the text and the notation (which is based on the Greek alphabet). While it may come as a surprise to some that so much written music has survived from the ancient world, many of the surviving passages are quite fragmentary.
