Public Library And Other Stories

The stories in Public Libraries and Other Stories are full of things/subjects: a disabled woman trapped on a train, Katherine Mansfield, families - especially fathers, credit card identity theft, searching for "elsewhere", D.H. Lawrence's ashes, Dusty Springfield, Olive Fraser, an obscure (to me when I read the story, anyway, though she won't be any longer) Scottish poet - http://www.scottishpoetrylibr

Public Library and Other Stories by Ali Smith

Ali Smith's Public Library and Other Stories is more on the inconsistent side of things. Part of the issue is that her stories tend to ramble and meander with long, run-on like sentences. The stories verge more toward the literary, thinking person's type rather than the fun and exciting.

Beautiful stories sweetly told I already love Ali Smith's literature; I think she's a modern genius. This collection is more than a collection and more than a treatise on the public library. The stories told, herein, contain all the magic of childhood books and all the mystique and mastery of Tolstoy.
