The Nordic model approach to prostitution, also known as neo-abolitionism, the sex buyer law and the Swedish model, is an approach to prostitution law. Though it is often called the "Nordic model", it has only been adopted in three of the Nordic countries, and has no connection to the socioeconomic model of the same name. The Nordic model is based criminalising the buyers and decriminalising the prostitutes. The main objective of the model is to decrease the demand for prostitution by punishing
