Motif Tracking: A Streetcar Named Desire - Music .
Summary: In A Streetcar Named Desire, Williams uses music heavily in his stage directions. It is used by him to foreshadow events later on in the play but also to represent characters and the social class that they in turn also represent.

Motif Tracking: Streetcar - Music

A Streetcar Named Desire term paper begins by introducing the character of Stanley Kowalski as he approaches his and his wife's ramshackle apartment, accompanied by another coarsely dressed man, and brusquely tosses a blood-stained parcel from the butcher to his wife Stella with only the monosyllable "Meat!" by way of an explanation.

A Streetcar Named Desire - Stanley and Blanche

In the novel 'A Streetcar Named Desire' by Tennessee Williams, a scene that often catches the attention of readers is the poker scene. It begins when Blanche and Stella return from seeing a show too early, not wanting to have been a distraction or a nuisance while the men played poker.

Stanley rudely dismisses the ladies making sure they know they aren't welcome to join in, the tension escalates as does the banter and Stanley whacks Stella's thigh to end the discussion.
