Conceptualizing a case systemically can be challenging, because of the many family members and influences that are relevant to our work with clients. In the practicum courses I teach, students are required to write a case summary and present the case to the class. In this post, I outline and explain the sections of the case summary assignment.

A therapist's lens, frame, understanding, or conceptualization, whatever it may be called, is the blueprint for engagement. In this text, we use the term case conceptualization to refer to the therapist's understanding of how families develop and maintain problems and how the therapist helps them to change.

CHAPTER 1

Developing Case Conceptualizations

QUESTIONS FOR A STRUCTURAL CASE CONCEPTUALIZATION
The lenses used in this article to develop a structural family therapy case conceptualization are not all inclusive. There are other areas that could help provide a richer view of the family. However, the 6 Ps tend to be the primary areas of inclusion.

Case conceptualization refers to how a therapist thinks about, or conceptualizes, the client's concerns. These conceptualizations inform all aspects of treatment, including who should attend sessions, the type of therapeutic relationship, the therapist's theoretical orientation, and therapeutic interventions. Each theoretical model has a unique approach to developing a case conceptualization.

A Formulation Model for Use in Family Therapy - Carr ...

Solution-focused brief therapy (SFBT) was developed as a form of family therapy.

Recently, these features have blurred. This case study explores how Insoo Kim Berg interacts with multiple family members in SFBT. The results indicate that she used a circular procedure to ensure that all the family members were involved in the process.
