The Fear of Death in White Noise by Don DeLillo, An Essay

White Noise describes an academic year in the life of its narrator, Jack Gladney, a college professor in a small American town. The novel itself can be hard to follow, since Jack spends much of his time detailing seemingly inconsequential conversations, and several events in the novel have no direct impact on the action of the story.

White Noise: Plot Overview | SparkNotes

Thus, DeLillo uses Jack's reaction to death as a way of revealing the human tendency to use analysis as a way of over-compensating for fear. The characters in White Noise commit themselves so wholeheartedly to flawed logic that they appear willing to abandon fact—that is, as long as their theories are rhetorically (not factually) sound. By formulating such strongly intellectual arguments, they therefore feel more in control of their circumstances.
