considers segregation
 as the unequal distribution of social groups in the urban space. These two approaches tend to be used separately from one another, and among them the geographical approach is most commonly used. Most existing studies of urban segregation have their main focus on residential locations. The spatial aspect of urban segregation is usually assumed to be uneven locational housing patterns.

Urban ecological theory recognizes that segregation may arise through one or more of several avenues, including economic competition, social distance dynamics, and discrimination. These distinct mechanisms are not mutually exclusive. All may operate simultaneously, all are predicted by ecological theory under certain con-

Journal of Mathematical Sociology

Gentrification is a process of changing the character of a neighborhood through the influx of more affluent residents and businesses. It is a common and controversial topic in politics and in urban planning. Gentrification often increases the economic value of a neighborhood, but the resulting demographic change is frequently a cause of controversy. . Gentrification often shifts a neighborhood ...

Gentrification - Wikipedia

What we think of as urban geography (even if done in sociology departments) was most conspicuously associated with segregation. Our early modernist theories of cities, brought about by the Chicago School, were animated by the movement of new groups—immigrants mostly—into and out of different urban neighborhoods.
