Nick Hall is back and taking the story to a new highlight. For me, Douglas Richards is evolving into a more advanced author. The start of the BrainWeb is quite horrific but too realistic to ignore. Combing action and technology was always a strong point of Douglas but this time the main characters are deepening as well.

Nick Hall wakes up in a dumpster, with no memory but the ability to read minds. Oh, and he can access the Internet just using his brain. So a great premise. The first half continued to be pretty good as Nick works out how to handle his new powers and meets a girl with whom he can communicate telepathically.
