Catfish naturally lives in the Mekong basin in Vietnam to the north of the river in China's Yunnan province. However, due to many different threats, catfish have migrated and lived in wider dispersion. Now people only see them appear in the middle of the Mekong River.

An introduction to giant fish in Mekong river

The Wonders of the Mekong project team received information about a dried-up pond where villagers found some endangered fishes. Local villagers asked the team to save these fish. Currently, they are being reared at the Freshwater Aquaculture Research and Development Center (FARDeC) in Bati Village, Peam Ror Commune, Peam Ror District, Prey Veng Province, and will eventually be released into a fish conservation area.
