Air by Geoff Ryman - Goodreads

Ryman is an author whose name I've seen around a lot, generally attached to awards (for those keeping score and feeling more validated by reading books that are winners, this one won the British Science Fiction Association Award, the James Tiptree, Jr Award and the Arthur C Clarke Award) but given his relatively sparse output (only eight novels since 1984) I had never really encountered him until I bought this book seven years ago and got around to reading it now.

Air or Have Not Have an extract from the novel by Geoff Ryman . I. Mae lived in the last village in the world to go on line.
 After that, everyone else went on Air.
 Mae was the village's fashion expert.
 She advised on makeup, sold cosmetics, and provided good dresses. Every farmer's wife needed at least one good dress.

Air - a novel extract by Geoff Ryman

Ryman never betrays his setting to a fantastic technological future full of SF gadgetry, nor does he fall into the trap of writing a story about beautiful people and hidden princes. Instead, he does such a job with human drama that Mae's description of her village near the end of the story is one of the most emotionally powerful pieces of writing I have ever read.
