Skeletal pathology can prove to be particularly important in forensic contexts in cases where other aspects of the osteological profile are very similar. For example, in war graves, most of the deceased are the same sex and similar age and are therefore not easily distinguished based on age and sex alone.

ABSTRACT:

Background: In forensic science the identification of a human is based on three important factors: Age, Sex and Stature. Bones are an important tool for it and among human bones the pelvis and the skull are the most reliable source for sex determination.

Human bones are the remains of once-living people and they require ethical and legal consideration above and beyond other forms of archaeological and forensic evidence.

Human remains should always be treated with care and respect. The analysis of real human bones is essential to teaching because humans express skeletal traits in a variety of subtly different ways.
