Consciousness, unlike animal awareness, is not a unitary phenomenon but a composite process. Torey's account shows how protolanguage evolved into language, how a brain subsystem for the emergent mind was built, and why these developments are opaque to introspection. We experience the brain's functional autonomy, he argues, as free will. Torey proposes that once life began, consciousness had to emerge—because consciousness is the informational source of the brain's behavioral response.

An accessible and engaging account of the mind and its connection to the brain. The mind encompasses everything we experience, and these experiences are created by the brain—often without our awareness. Experience is private; we can't know the minds of others. But we also don't know what is happening in our own minds.

The Conscious Mind: In Search of a Fundamental Theory was published in 1996, and is the first book written by David Chalmers, an Australian philosopher specialising in philosophy of mind. Though the book has been greatly influential , Chalmers maintains that it is "far from perfect", as most of it was written as part of his PhD dissertation after "studying philosophy for only four years".

The Conscious Mind - Wikipedia

This ability of your conscious mind to direct your attention and awareness is one of the most important powers you have, and to create change in your life you must learn to control what you consciously focus on. But how do you do that? The actual skill of directing your focus is quite simple ... all it comes down to is making a choice.

The Conscious Mind - How Can We Use It To Create Change ...

This is not one of the better books I've read on the topic of consciousness, for three reasons: (1) Unlike Free Will, Mark Balaguer's book in the same MIT series, The Conscious Mind is written in a style that doesn't show much respect for others' ideas, (2) is riddled with assumptions and poor logic, and (3) makes bold claims that the pages contain answers to many very difficult problems that have eluded other great minds, but I was unsatisfied with any of the attempts.

The Conscious Mind by Zoltan Torey - Goodreads

The mystical psychiatrist Richard Maurice Bucke, author of the 1901 book Cosmic Consciousness: A Study in the Evolution of the Human Mind, distinguished between three types of consciousness: 'Simple Consciousness', awareness of the body, possessed by many animals; 'Self Consciousness', awareness of being aware, possessed only by humans; and 'Cosmic Consciousness', awareness of the life and order of the universe, possessed only by humans who are enlightened.
