Software Copyright Law

Software copyright is the application of copyright law to machine-readable software. While many of the legal principles and policy debates concerning software copyright have close parallels in other domains of copyright law, there are a number of distinctive issues that arise with software.

Software copyright - Wikipedia

Software copyright is predominantly used by software developers and proprietary software owners to prevent unauthorized copying of their software. The copyright holder is typically the work's creator, or a publisher or other business to whom copyright has been assigned. Copyright holders routinely invoke legal and technological measures to prevent and penalize copyright infringement (more commonly referred to as piracy) where works protected by copyright law are used without permission.

Software Copyright - Quick Guide (2020)

With regard to software, copyright law generally covers the artistic elements of a software program as opposed to the functional elements. What Is The Source Of Copyright Law In The UK? Copyright law originated in the United Kingdom from a concept of common law; the Statute of Anne 1709.

Copyright Law Basics For UK Software Developers — Smashing ...

A software patent or copyright is a legal way to protect your software source code, idea, or invention. Every software developer or company has to choose between patent and copyright. Some decide they want both. To make the choice, you have to think about what you're protecting.

Software Patent or Copyright | UpCounsel 2020

Copying software is an act of copyright infringement and is subject to civil and criminal penalties. It's illegal whether you use the copied software yourself, give it away, or sell it. In the 1970s and 1980s, there were extensive discussions on whether the patent system, the copyright system, or a sui generis system, should provide protection for computer software. These discussions resulted in the generally accepted principle that computer programs should be protected by copyright, whereas apparatus using computer software or software-related inventions should be protected ...

Copyright Protection of Computer Software

A common example where the copyright ownership needs to be established as soon as possible is where a business hires a third party website developer to create a new website or software platform. As the website developer is the author of the work, it will own the copyright in the works unless the copyright position is dealt with differently in the contract.

UK copyright law: the basics

Design protects any decorative part of your software. Unlike copyright law, patent law protects the invention itself. That way, someone can't create a software program with different code that does the exact same thing your software does. But the patent doesn't protect your specific lines of code against plagiarism the way copyright does.
