THREE ARGUMENTS THAT THERE MUST BE MORE TO MEANING THAN REFERENCE. 1.1. Frege’s puzzle about identity sentences. As Frege says at the outset of “On sense and reference,” identity “gives rise to challenging questions which are not altogether easy to answer.”. The puzzle raised by identity sentences is that, if, even though “the morning star” and “the evening star” have the same reference — the planet Venus — the sentences [1] The morning star is the morning star. 3.2 Frege’s Theory of Sense and Denotation. To explain these puzzles, Frege suggested (1892a) that in addition to having a denotation, names and descriptions also express a sense. The sense of an expression accounts for its cognitive significance—it is the way by which one conceives of the denotation of the term.

Gottlob Frege (Stanford Encyclopedia of Philosophy)

This chapter analyzes Frege's theory of sense and reference. There is in a sense a “backward road” from references to senses. For everyone who specifies a reference must do so in some way. Then, by her awareness of how she has specified the reference, she is aware of the way the reference is fixed, and hence is aware of the sense.

Frege's notion of Bedeutungis one of the most controversial notions in his philosophy. There is not even any agreement on how to translate the term into English. Different proposals have been made: “nominatum” (Carnap/Feigl), “reference” (Black), “significance” (Tugendhat), or “meaning”.

Frege's Theory of Sense and Reference - Cambridge Core

Frege introduces a new theoretical notion, sense, which he thinks can resolve at least parts of each of the preceding three objections to the theory of language of the Begriffsschrift: “It is natural, now, to think of there being connected with a sign, ...besides that to which the sign refers, ...what I should like to call the sense of the sign, wherein the mode of presentation is concerned.”

Frege’s theory of sense - University of Notre Dame

A sense, according to Frege, is a mode of presentationof an object and a way of thinkingof an object. A sense presentsor determinesan object. Each of the above definite descriptions expressesa sense, and each refers to whatever object its sense presents. Frege claimed that proper names also express senses.

2. Frege’s Theory of Sense and Reference

The theory I will be discussing in this paper is that of Frege and his idea of the ‘sense’ of a word. In my understanding of Frege’s theory, and his definition of the ‘sense’, I see a very elegant solution to many of the problems posed by the referential theory of meaning.

What Do We Mean? On Frege’s ‘Sense & Reference’ - A.Boy

In the philosophy of language, the distinction between sense and reference was an innovation of the German philosopher and mathematician Gottlob Frege in 1892, reflecting the two ways he believed a singular term may have meaning. The reference of a proper name is the object it means or indicates, whereas its sense is what the name expresses. The reference of a sentence is its truth value, whereas its sense is the thought that it expresses. Frege justified the distinction in a number of ways. Sen

Gottlob Frege's Sense and Reference - SlideShare

Frege's 1892 paper, "On Sense and Reference" ("Über Sinn und Bedeutung"), introduced his influential distinction between sense ("Sinn") and reference ("Bedeutung", which has also been translated as "meaning", or "denotation"). While conventional accounts of meaning took expressions to have just one feature (reference), Frege introduced the view that expressions have two different aspects of significance: their sense and their reference.
