Introduction. · weathering, erosion, and deposition are a main force behind landscape types. · But they are not the only reason for a plain, plateau, and mountain region to form. o Other factors such as glaciation and tectonic activity lead to landscape building. § In New York State, glaciation is one of the main causes of many types of landscape regions.

Weathering breaks down the Earth's surface into smaller pieces. Those pieces are moved in a process called erosion, and deposited somewhere else. Weathering can be caused by wind, water, ice, plants, gravity, and changes in temperature. To better understand how the erosion and weathering process works....

Weathering and Erosion | Science Lesson For Kids | Grades 3-5

Erosion is the movement of the particles by ice, wind, or water. The particles are then transported by that agent until they are deposited to form sedimentary deposits, which can be later eroded again or transformed into sedimentary rocks. The weathering of the sediment grains continues during erosion and transportation.

Weathering - CliffsNotes

the process where sediments are released/dropped by their agent of erosion.
-Process of erosion stops: •when the moving particles fall out of the transporting medium and settle on a surface. -Speed of the medium slows or the resistance of the particles increases, the balance changes and causes deposition.
-Speed can be reduced by large rocks, hills, vegetation, etc.
