"A magnificent failure" While Cooke and Wheatstone were developing their telegraph and attempting to interest various rail companies in it, Edward Davy was developing an electric telegraph with a relay system. Davy, however, unlike Cooke and Wheatstone or Morse, is completely unknown today.

Edward Davy - 'A Magnificent Failure'

Some 70 black-and-white duotone photographs, with detailed captions, record the bleak landscapes and the abandoned farms, outbuildings, farm implements, and hand tools that are mute testimonies to the failed hopes of several million families who settled on these arid and semi-arid lands. The author explains how their failure resulted from a deadly combination of natural and economic causes.

today. "I screw up so much it hurts." The star of television show Two and a Half Men
said this not to be self-
