Spykman pointed out that most of the world's productive potential was in the Rimland, not within the Heartland.

Mackinder's Heartland Theory - ThoughtCo

Again, Spykman differs from Mackinder, who sees Eurasian wars as historically pitting the Heartland against the sea powers for control of the rimland, establishing a land power-sea power opposition. Spykman states that historically, battles have pitted either Britain and Rimland allies against Russia and its Rimland allies or Britain and Russia together against a dominating Rimland power.

Another geographer and early thinker in geopolitics, Nicholas Spykman, came up with a diametrically opposite position on the basis of the same type of reasoning: a historical analysis, just as Eurocentric as that of Mackinder, that led him to a final conclusion that asserted the contrary to Mackinder's mantra:

Though he did some work of a "normal science" type and in state-level geopolitics, he is best known, as a theoretical geopolitician, for his part in the system-level grand-theoretical debate over Mackinder's Heartland doctrine, to which he counterposed his own Rimland idea, which remains theoretically significant.
