A stretcher-bearer is a person who carries a stretcher, generally with another person at its other end, especially in a war or emergency times when there is a very serious accident or a disaster. In case of military personnel, for example removing wounded or dead from a battlefield, the modern term is combat medic who will have received considerable training. Stretcher-bearers would have received basic first-aid training. The wounded soldier had to wait until the stretcher-bearers arrived or simply

Stretcher bearer - Wikipedia

My name is Chris and I was a stretcher bearer in the First World War. It was my job to go out into the trenches and no man's land and collect the wounded soldiers. I worked with my friend Edgar, we would both go out with our stretcher and look for the wounded. The stretchers that we were using were rubbish, and they were very heavy!
