Uses and Gratification Theory - Learning Theories

Uses and gratification theory makes you aware of how people use media for their needs and gratification. In other words, it is the theory that tells you about what people do with the media, instead of what media does to the people. The uses and gratification theory opposes the magic bullet theory that states that audience is passive.

Uses and Gratifications Theory: One influential tradition in media research is referred to as 'uses and gratifications'

(occasionally 'needs and gratifications'). This approach focuses on why people use particular media rather than on content.

Uses and Gratifications Theory - Mass

Communication Talk

Definition
Uses and Gratifications Theory is a popular approach to understanding mass communication. The theory places more focus on the consumer, or audience, instead of the actual message itself by asking "what people do with media" rather than "what media does to people" (Katz, 1959).

Uses and Gratifications Theory - SlideShare

Uses and gratifications is one such perspective. Uses and gratifications is a social and psychological theory that suggests human communication behavior is driven by people's needs and desires (e.g., Katz, Blumler, & Gurevitch, 1973, 1974; Rosengren, 1974). We communicate and use media to satisfy those needs and desires.
