Biometrics allows a person to be identified and authenticated based on recognizable and verifiable data, which are unique and specific to them.

Biometric authentication compares data for the person's characteristics to that person's biometric "template" to determine resemblance. The reference model is first stored.

Biometrics in 2020 (FAQs, use cases, technology)

The biometrics identity verification system determines the resemblance of an individual by comparing the live-captured unique characteristics of a person against a biometric template stored in a database. The reference model of biometrics information is stored against which the system authenticates the information captured in real-time asking, "Are you indeed, who you say you are?".
