As one of the most basics skills of any artist, drawing is an essential part of the creative process. Centuries later, we still remain fascinated by the sketches in Leonardo's notebooks and Picasso's poetic line art, each for their respective ability to show us the purest form of an artist's skill. But you don't necessarily have to attend art school in order to learn the basic drawing techniques.

Your ellipsis falls right where the grammar gets decided. It is hard to tell whether the obscurity of the sentence is due to that or to the writer's mental state, but playing it as it lies, "to free the look of something into something" is a structure with which I am not familiar (read "nonsense"). I also can't see how the first blow can be two separate things.
