A Kiss for Julie, page 1. Julie enjoyed her work as a medical secretary at St. Bravo's Hospital, so it came as a shock when her boss announced his retirement. His replacement, Simon van der Driesma, was younger, more energetic and worked her much harder—which she could have accepted if only he would call her Julie, and not “Miss Beckworth” in that cool voice!

A Kiss for Julie (Best of Betty Neels): Neels, Betty ...

The professor, sitting at his desk watching Julie’s charming back view as she typed, abandoned the notes he was preparing for a lecture and reviewed the situation; after three days there had been no obvious signs of Julie responding to his overtures of friendship. On the contrary, she was, if anything, decidedly tart.

The professor, a man with iron self-control, allowed it to slip. He left his desk and folded her into his arms and kissed her. He had been wanting to kiss her for a long time now, and he made the most of his chances. Julie didn’t try to stop him; it was his bleep that did that. He let her go reluctantly and picked up the phone.

Julie, dressed and wrapped in the coat, her stylish sandals already nipping her toes, got into the taxi her mother had insisted upon her having. The entrance hall at St Bravo’s was thronged, but Oliver was looking out for her, and once she had left her coat in the improvised cloakroom they made their way to the hospital lecture hall—a vast place, decorated now with streamers and balloons.
