He Who Is

"Who" refers to personal identification (usually the name). If someone asks you "who is he/she" or "who are they," they are basically asking for the narrowest possible definition that could apply to the subject. "What," on the other hand, essentially asks you to provide information about the subject's wider category.

HESA collects data from universities, higher education colleges and other specialist providers of higher education. Collectively, we refer to these organisations as higher education (HE) providers. Most tables of HESA data count students at publicly funded higher education institutions plus the University of Buckingham. From 2016/17, HE level students at further education (FE) colleges in Wales are included, but not HE level students at FE colleges in England, Scotland or Northern Ireland.
