Science in Early Modern Europe challenged ancient beliefs while at the same time building upon scientific achievements of the Middle ages. This scientific revolution corresponds to the period historians refer to as the Enlightenment which is to early modern science and philosophy as the Renaissance is to early modern art, or as historian Merry E. Weisner-Hanks says, "The Enlightenment was a self-conscious intellectual movement in the same way as the Renaissance had been."

Here also, the pendulum image is useful to illustrate the swing from the Modernism of the Enlightenment (characterized by – perhaps excessive – belief in Truth, in Reason, in Progress, and optimism about science and technology) to Postmodernism (with its cognitive relativism, pessimism about technology and, consequently, risk evaluation and management becoming ideological and political).
