In 1925, a third of all sociology graduate students attended the University of Chicago. Chicago was very good at not isolating their students from other schools. They encouraged them to blend with other sociologists, and to not spend more time in the class room than studying the society around them.

History of sociology - Wikipedia

The term sociology was coined by Auguste Comte (1798-1857) in 1838 from the Latin term socius (companion, associate) and the Greek term logia (study of, speech). Comte hoped to unify all the sciences under sociology; he believed sociology held the potential to improve society and direct human activity, including the other sciences.

Introduction to Sociology - University of Florida

I found an anonymously written PowerPoint and a couple of good Sociology articles from Wikipedia that caught my interest. According to the fun fact, "Sociology took root primarily in France, Germany, and England in the 19th century." And with my findings, that is correct. It started shortly after the French Revolution.
