Introduction. The core aim of the Land Registration Act (LRA) 2002 is “to ensure that ownership of land in England and Wales takes the form of ‘title by registration’, rather than ‘registration of title’.”. [ 1] This marks a radical departure from centuries of land law, which established possession as the basis of title. [ 2]

For example, if A signs a contract to purchase land from B, but B refuses to complete the contract, equity will grant the remedy of specific performance against B, and B will have to transfer the land to A. This happened so routinely that eventually A was treated in equity as if he held a property interest in the land once the contract was signed.
