Evaluating Competencies Forensic Assessments And ...

In the United States criminal justice system, a competency evaluation is an assessment of the ability of a defendant to understand and rationally participate in a court process. Competency was originally established by the Supreme Court of the United States as the evaluation of a defendant's competence to proceed to trial. In a subsequent ruling, the Court held that any prisoner facing the death penalty must be evaluated as competent to be executed, meaning that he must be capable of understandi

Competency evaluation (law) - Wikipedia

Competency issues can arise at several different junctures along the life cycle of a case. While one's competency to stand trial is perhaps the most familiar question raised, there are other types of competency disputes that may warrant expert competency assessment by a forensic psychiatrist. These functions include competency to represent one's self, competency to plea, competency to be sentenced, and competency to be executed.

Competency to Stand Trial | Competency Assessment & Evaluation

To illustrate how critical the clinical evaluation is in CST evaluations, and that a clinical evaluation cannot be replaced by a competency assessment instrument, consider the following case. "Jodi," a 25-year-old law student with a long history of treatment nonadherence, once again stops her medications because they made her thinking "too slow."

Assessing Competency To Stand Trial | Psychiatric Times

A woman impersonated a prosecutor in order to file fake documents with a court that declared a stalking and drug possession case against her had been dropped. Lisa Landon, 33, of Littleton, a town in New Hampshire, attracted the attention of prosecutors after a state forensic examiner who was to perform a competency evaluation on her noticed that the charges had been 'dropped'.
