Since faith pertains to our future hope, which is yet unseen, it is understandable that faith is also described as “the conviction [‘evidence,’ in other versions] of things not seen” (11:1). We trust in things not directly accessible to our five senses, but that does not mean our faith lacks evidence. We believe based on the testimony of eyewitnesses who have seen and touched Christ (2 Peter 1:16; 1 John 1:1-5). Faith is not blind credulity or belief for the sake of making us feel ...
