Democratization And The Military In

For states with legacies of militaries playing a central role in politics, democratization requires the developing of strong and legitimate institutions to separate the political elite from the armed forces, and more importantly, for these institutions to exercise oversight over the military.

 However, since democracy does not have as much of a need for coercion as the nondemocratic regime, the military anticipates future reforms by the democratic government to reduce its size and power. This anticipation induces the military to take action against nascent democratic regimes, unless credible commitments for the continued role of the military in politics or other significant concessions can be made.

The disgruntled establishment embarked on a de-democratization effort in 2005. They resorted to coups to topple the elected government in 2006, 2008, and 2014. The military and the judiciary played a critical role in these coups because they placed extreme loyalty to the monarchy ahead of democratic procedures.

Demokratizatsiya (Russian: Демократизация, IPA: [dʲɪməkɾətʲɪˈzatsɨjə], democratization) was a slogan introduced by Soviet Communist Party General Secretary Mikhail Gorbachev in January 1987 calling for the infusion of "democratic" elements into the Soviet Union's single-party government.

Demokratizatsiya (Soviet Union) - Wikipedia

By Charles (Chip) Hauss August 2003 Democratization is one of the most important concepts and trends in modern political science, one whose significance is just beginning to be understood by conflict-resolution practitioners. On one level, it is a relatively simple idea, since democratization is simply the establishment of a democratic political regime.

Democratization | Beyond Intractability

The military maintained a firm grip through the constitution and gave us a so-called democracy. But it is fair to say that it is a sham democracy. KZM: The uprising hoped to achieve genuine democracy. Ko Sanny said that people asked for democracy through that popular movement, but the military regime refused to give it.
