Maru Bessie Head

Maru is a novella by Bessie Head, who was one of Africa's greatest female writers. This novella packs in a lot of themes in 123 pages: racism, class-ism, male and female relationships, oppression, friendship, rivalry, jealousy, spirituality, love, and confusion. Maru revolves around a love square, not a triangle, of two men and two women.

The paper is a critical study of the politics of race, power and gender in Bessie Head's Maru (1971). The paper analyzes the role of cultural and psychological forces that help maintain patriarchal hegemony, which is based upon hierarchy and domination of women rather than equality.

Bessie Head's Maru: A Study in Race, Power and Gender

I have so struggled to put Maru (by Bessie Head, published 1971) into context that I even reread the short novel (130 pages) before I attempted to write my thoughts. My second read solidified my perception that Maru is a type of warped fairy tale, one especially with no happily ever after. Although the prince-like Maru marries the despised and hated woman of the town of Dilepe, Margaret is no Cinderella, especially since she loves someone else and considers Maru her equal, not her superior.

Maru by Bessie Head (Book Review) - YouTube

Born from a white mother and a black father, Bessie Head grew up in the early stages of Apartheid South Africa. In Maru she reflects upon her own experiences of love, loneliness and prejudice. Prejudice spreads as one discriminates against another and creates false images. Love contradicts loneliness, which diminishes as the plot progresses.
