Marx and American Exceptionalism The United States was a case study in Marx's theory of modernization. Here, he wrote, capitalism developed "as in a greenhouse"; here, he saw the first fully realized bourgeois country, which conditioned its people to the idea that "work is the key to wealth, and wealth the only object of work."

Marx's America - Jacobin

The most manifest sign of the resurgence of Marxism in the West is the "Black Lives Matter" movement, whose slogan has elicited so much support from politicians, academics, the media, and even corporate executives, owing to a widespread (if far from fully justified) sense of guilt about the state of race relations in America.
