Often we would be driving in his half-ton pickup truck to a work site and the song, "Georgia on My Mind," would play on the radio. My grandfather would sing along and after a while tears would come to his eyes and for a good while afterwards he would gush about his love of Georgia and I always wondered as a kid, if he loved it so much, why did he leave it for a foreign region where he and his family were lost in a sea of White folks?

When things finally settle in Georgia, the Senate races will have the distinction of being among the costliest in history. With nearly a month left to go before voting day, the money already spent on advertising eclipses the most expensive races of 2018 (Graph 1). The Georgia races may be the first-ever to reach the half-billion-dollar mark.
