There is a lot of tearing up of the construction paper in this craft, so kids get practice on their fine motor skills, as well as following directions. Depending on the age of your students, there is a bit of prep work. Our kids are 3 and 4 year olds, so we precut the black and yellow paper into 1 inch strips, the paper towel wings, as well as cut out all of the template pieces.

The first thing to do will be measuring the width of your shoulders (1' 5" for me), and using that for the width of the top of the dome. Cut out the piece that is the top of the dome (shoulder width by drawing length), by using the drawing for length reference. For me, this first piece was 1' 5" by 1' 1".
