Electronic engine control (EEC): An EEC is essentially a hydromechanical fuel control but with added electrical components to prevent overheating or overspeeding the engine. If the electrical part of the control should fail, an EEC will revert to a standard hydromechanical fuel control. Full-authority digital engine control (FADEC): A digital computer which controls a servo-operated fuel valve. In this case the power lever is only electrically connected to the fuel control. Fuel control unit - Wikipedia

Aviation dictionary. Engine control unit — An engine control unit (ECU) is an electronic control unit which controls various aspects of an internal combustion engine's operation. The simplest ECUs control only the quantity of fuel injected into each cylinder each engine cycle.

fuel control unit - Academic Dictionaries and Encyclopedias

Fuel Control Unit Fuel Control Unit is a core part of Fuel Control System with the full authority of electronics (FADEC) for the DV-2 jet engine family. Jihostroj produces the fuel control system of the turboprop engines M-601 of all versions. It is a hydromechanical system with electronic limiter of limit parameters.

Fuel Control Unit - Jihostroj - Engine components, controls

The fuel control system includes a low power sensitive torque motor which may be activated to increase or decrease fuel flow in the automatic mode (EFCU mode). The torque motor provides an interface to an electronic control unit that senses various engine and ambient parameters and activates the torque motor to meter fuel flow accordingly.

The function of this unit is to control engine air intake and to set the metered fuel flow for proper fuel-air ratio. There are three control elements in this unit, one for air and two for fuel, one of which is for fuel mixture and the other for fuel metering. Fuel enters the control unit through a strainer and passes to the metering valve.
