My question/issue is connecting an external audio amplifier to a Samsung TX-P3071WH HD television. I have tried several times over the last few years, and the "MONITOR OUT" set up (per the Owners' Manual) simply does not work. I am in the middle of moving all the AV stuff around, so I thought I would try it again.

This is loud enough for me, in fact having more power is a danger in my opinion. Rock fans who like 115 dB SPL will find 98 dB SPL totally lame. AKG K 240 monitor phones made to the old 600 ohm standard will not be loud enough for anyone. When this amplifier is connected to certain cable and source impedances, supersonic feedback appears to occur.
