Cold Knap Lake - Gillian Clarke

For Gillian Clarke, memory is a fickle thing, one that is difficult to properly gauge and define. Her work, Cold Knap Lake, captures the essence of a memory, and nothing more — just its essence, its form with the edges blurred, its finer details hidden. It is a powerful poem that beautifully captures the atmospheric tones of a memory from long ago, and examines the nature of that memory.

Cold Knap Lake - Poetry Archive

It is about a girl who nearly drowned in a lake and was given the kiss of life by Clarke's mother. When the child was taken back to her 'poor house', she was 'thrashed for almost drowning'. This frightening memory leads the poet to question the ability of our memories to retell the truth - she wonders about other influences that could cloud the precision of our memories.

English Literature GCSE: Gillian Clarke on her poem 'Cold ...

Gillian Clarke offers the reader a profoundly haunting insight about her poem and memory itself at the end of 'Cold Knap Lake.' She argues: 'All Lost things lie under closing water' which seems a very apt visual message when we consider the content and 'story' of the poem, as well as brilliantly encapsulating the elegiac concerns of both this individual poem and much of her other poetry.
