The main skill of a Business Analyst is to equate requirements as stories. Every story consists of 3 main parts: Characters, Setting, and Plot. Characters are the people in the story. These are the actors in our requirements.

How to tell stories as a Business Analyst?

A cautionary tale is a traditional story with a moral message warning of the consequences of certain actions, inactions, or character flaws. The narrative may be a fable, proverb, or urban legend. Sometimes the story ends with a line telling what the moral of the story is, while other times it is simply embedded in the story.
