Teaching a Word Study Program. In my first grade classroom, I've used a combination of strategies, programs, and activities throughout the year to teach my students phonics, words, and spelling in order to learn to read and write. Most years, I usually teach a grade 1/2 combined class so that means a lot of differentiation is needed to meet the needs of all my learners.

The goals of phonics and word study instruction are to teach children that there are systematic relationships between letters and sounds, that written words are composed of letter patterns representing the sounds of spoken words, that recognizing words quickly and accurately is a way of obtaining meaning from them, and that they can blend sounds to read words and segment words into sounds to spell (Adams, 1990; Chard & Osborn, 1999; NRP, 2000).

The term phonics instruction refers to teaching students about the relationship between sounds and written letters (known as the alphabetic principle) so that the students learn how to decode and read words. In word study instruction, students learn to use complex elements of reading to decode more advanced words (e.g., students learn how to decode words based on associated word meanings and by learning how to identify word parts, such as affixes and root words).
