BBC - Religions - Judaism: Animals

Religion or a culture like Judaism, at least three thousand years old, cannot be expected to be all of one piece, homogeneous, self-contained, consistent, a neatly constructed system of ideas. If Judaism were that, it would have died centuries ago and would be a subject of interest only to the historian and archaeologist. Judaism has been a living force precisely because it is a teeming ...

The United Nations established the Universal Declaration of Human Rights in 1948. [23] They created a list of human rights that all countries could agree on. The Human right that the holocaust goes against is don't discriminate; these rights belong to everybody whatever they're differences. [24]

Impact of the Holocaust on Jews - UKEssays.com

Culture matters because cultural traditions and beliefs are often stronger than laws and to get to the roots of human rights issues we need to engage at a cultural level. As an example, discrimination and violence against women and harmful practices such as female genital mutilation and child marriage are illegal in many countries—they are against the law—and yet they persist.
