Self-ligating brackets are defined as "a dental brace, which generally utilizes a permanently installed, moveable component to entrap the archwire". Self-ligating brackets have also been designed which do not require a movable component to hold the wire in place. Self-ligating braces may be classified into two categories: Passive and Active. These braces were typically made from stainless steel but, in some cases, are available in ceramic or polycarbonate.

Self-ligating bracket - Wikipedia

In the case of your more traditional braces, the orthodontist uses elastics to keep the archwire on the bracket. In self-ligating braces, the archwire is held in place by the bracket itself by closing a small, spring-loaded door. Although the popularity of this bracket style has climbed over the last 10 years or so, the system itself has been around since the mid-1930s. There are numerous manufacturers of this type of bracketing system.

What You Need to Know About Self-Ligating Braces ...

When it comes to traditional braces, an orthodontist uses elastics (elastomeric ligation) to keep the archwire in the brackets by default. However, in self-ligating braces, special clips or brackets equipped with small, spring-loaded doors hold the archwire within the metal braces by closing the doors and move the teeth in proper alignment.

Self-ligating brackets, on the other hand, use some form of door or clip to secure the wire thus eliminating the need for those colored rubber bands or tiny ligation wires. The idea of self-ligating brackets is nothing new, they were first conceived in 1935.

Deciphering the Truth on Self-Ligating Braces | TDR ...

Just like normal braces, self-ligating braces use a combination of wires and brackets to gently move your teeth into the correct place in your jaw over time. The brackets are fixed to the surfaces of each tooth, and a metal wire is engaged in each bracket to connect your teeth and expertly pull them in the right direction.

What are self-ligating braces?

Essentially, Self-Ligating Braces are when the braces are attached to the tooth and a metal door on the bracket holds the archwire freely into place. This helps to move teeth naturally as they are straightened. Unlike traditional braces, you don't need rubber bands or elastic rings to hold the orthodontic wire to the bracket.
