Group 3 elements like Al will form 3+ ions. So moving from Group 1 to Group 3 sees ions becoming smaller and more charged. In other words, the ions have a higher charge-density as we move across the period. And the metallic lattice will contain more electrons. So the attractions are getting stronger and the melting point should become higher.

The melting point is the highest temperature at which crystallization may occur. It is also a temperature at which a solid (crystal) turns into a liquid. We say that such a body melts. The melting point is specific for a given substance. For example, the melting point of ice (frozen water) is 0 \u00b0C. The melting point depends on the pressure.

The dropping melting point or dropping point is the temperature at which the sample flows through a 0.11-in hole in a sample up placed in a specialized furnace. The Wiley melting point measures the temperature at which a 1/8 x 3/8 in disc of fat suspended in an alcohol water mixture of similar density changes into a sphere.

Melting point range for tetracosane: 49-51 degrees Celsius. Melting point range for 1-tetradecanol: 37-40 degrees Celsius Melting point range for mixture: 34-37 degrees Celsius. I was instructed to record a melting point range for each compound, rather than a single melting temperature of different polymers">temperature melting point. The reason for this instruction is that polymers and unpure substance melt over a range of several degrees.

1. Melting point increases for metals Na, Mg and Al. Strength of metallic bonds is related to valency. Across the period the valency increases (from valency 1 in sodium to valency 3 in aluminium) so the metal atoms can delocalise more electrons to form more positively charged cations and a bigger sea of delocalised electrons.
