Politeness strategies are used to formulate messages in order to save the hearer's positive face when face-threatening acts are inevitable or desired.

Politeness theory - Wikipedia

Politeness theory relies, in part, on the idea that there are different kinds of face: positive face and negative face. Positive face reflects an individual's need for his or her wishes and desires to be appreciated in a social context. This is the maintenance of a positive and consistent self-image.

The Politeness Theory: A Guide for Everyone | UniversalClass

Brown and Levinson's (1987) notion of positive and negative politeness refers to linguistic devices used to satisfy positive and negative face needs. Speech acts are the reification of politeness, exemplifying social interactants' innate desire to look positive and be free from imposition.
