Problems of Method in Criminology Criminology is a young science and its position among the other social sciences has not yet been determined exactly. Since criminology deals with human behavior it is either a part of sociology or closely related to it. Most modern criminologists have a mainly sociological background.

Psychological and Psychiatric Concepts in Criminology

The New York Police Department (NYPD) has received considerable public attention for its use of Stop, Question and Frisk (SQF). Proponents of the policing tactic claim it is responsible for much or all of New York's crime decline. Few studies, however, have examined whether SQF reduces crime, and the existing research reaches conflicting ...
