One of Marc Chagall's projects included three stained glass windows for the Metz cathedral between 1958 and 1968, while in 1960 the artist was commissioned by Walter Hussey, the Dean of Chichester, to produce one window at Chichester Cathedral in England. The curiosity is that this particular window differs from other, more colorful glass works, since the dominant color here is red - affiliated with the colors of the nearby Benker Schirmer tapestry.
