Energy Metabolism Of Farm Animals

Abstract. Energy plays a major part in enabling a farm animal to produce the desired products. A considerable part of the total feed is needed for its maintenance. Utilization of feed energy involves energy losses with faeces, urine, combustible gases and heat. A survey is given on how and to what extent feed energy is converted into metabolizable energy (ME) and how efficiently the

ME is utilized for maintenance, work and synthesis — growth, milk, eggs wool —.

Energy Metabolism of Farm Animals from Summerfield Books

Introduction. Animal production systems have changed dramatically over the last two decades. Knowledge of energy metabolism and environmental physiology has increased as appears from many textbooks on these disciplines. The contents of the symposia on energy metabolism of farm animals show this and they have initially focussed on feed evaluation and later on comparative aspects of energy metabolism.
