Consideration of the quality of life of occupants in design, construction and operation. A design that enables adaptation to a changing environment. Any building can be a green building, whether it's a home, an office, a school, a hospital, a community centre, or any other type of structure, provided it includes features listed above.

However, it is worth noting that not all green buildings are – and need to be – the same.

What is green building? | World Green Building Council

A core challenge for developing green buildings is that the added value of many efficient, healthy, and sustainable attributes of housing isn't quantitative or easily measurable, and certainly not at a large scale. Because this added value isn't broadly measured, developers, lenders, and investors essentially don't "see" it.
